

As part of its commitment towards raising awareness for sustainable and environment friendly lifestyle, GAIL (India) Limited has partnered for a unique and exciting photography competition, 'The Earth We Share', which focusses on the environment and biodiversity.

As a responsible corporate, GAIL has been pursuing sustainable practices to generate long-term value by understanding & balancing the ecological, economic, and social environment. GAIL strives to play an important role in transitioning from polluting fuels to the cleaner natural gas, renewables, green hydrogen and other clean energies to strive for a greener and cleaner tomorrow.

GAIL has also been driving the social initiative, Hawa Badlo, to sensitise people to the harmful effects of pollution by mobilising collective societal efforts to improve the deteriorating air quality, by encouraging sustain-

Our beautiful planet Earth is home to more than just humans. Close to nine million species of flora and fauna call this planet their home. The wellbeing of each one of us depends on the wellbeing of the Earth, our home. The photography competition shines a light on this diversity and the need to cherish and preserve the same. All pictures submitted for the competition need to tell this story.

A story of shared destiny.

A story of diversity.

A story of interdependence.

The theme can be interpreted in many ways. It could be wildlife, flora or fauna. Or everyday stuff, happening around us — the choices we make adds up to 'The Earth We Share'.

The idea of the competition is allow talented photographers to canvas an inclusive planet. Diversity is not just about boardrooms and corporates — we first need to practise it everyday. Live and let live, share the love we get from mother Earth.
